Broadcast professor Zuchelli dies at 61

The man known affectionately as "Zuke" to generations of Cal Poly students and countless friends on the Central Coast is dead at 61 of an apparent heart attack.

Ed J. Zuchelli, a veteran broadcaster who had taught journalism at the university since 1969, collapsed Saturday while eating dinner in his Los Osos home and died hours later in a San Luis Obispo hospital.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Sutcliffe-Elliott Mortuary in San Luis Obispo.

Born Sept. 13, 1924 in Los Angeles, Zuchelli lived with his family in Hermosa Beach and Beverly Hills.

His prowess as a high school athlete won him a football scholarship to the University of Arizona at Tucson. But World War II and enlistment in the U.S. Army cut short his career.

He gave up all thought of athletic competition when he suffered an arm wound in the closing days of Gen. George Patton's rush toward Berlin. A private first class in the 89th Infantry Division, Zuchelli was captured by German SS troops, then liberated a week later by the men of his own company.

The wound and eight months of hospitalization in the United States did nothing to dampen Zuchelli's enthusiasm for sports. For the rest of his life he remained the quintessential jock. His cronies were coaches, players and collectors of sports trivia.

His radio job was as a part-time color man on prizefight broadcasts from the Ocean Park Arena for radio station KFOX in Long Beach. Later, he assisted in putting KCRW on the air from Santa Monica City College and served for two years as the station's news and sports director.

He went north to then College

More complaints filed in campaign for ASI president

By Craig Andrews

Staff Writer

An election complaint filed by former ASI presidential candidate Steve Johnson against ASI presidential candidate Tyler Hammond was withdrawn Friday, but a new complaint was filed by two other former candidates against Hammond and ASI presidential candidate Kevin Swanson.

The new complaint was filed by former ASI presidential candidates David Kaminskas and Mike Hogan against Hammond and Swanson, who are both slated for a runoff election this week.

Johnson's initial complaint accused Hammond of illegal placement of campaign materials, using ASI funds to pay for an endorsement and using a club's account without its permission.

Johnson said Friday: "I personally had become blinded by these elections."

Johnson said he talked with Hammond after a Student Senate meeting Wednesday night. "It's my opinion, after talking with Tyler, that Tyler never willfully, intentionally or maliciously violated campaign rules," he said.

Johnson initially alleged that Hammond used the account number of the California College Republicans Club (CCR) to make a campaign videotape without first getting approval from the club's executive committee. However, Hammond said it is rare for CCR to vote on fund allocations.

Before Johnson's withdrawal of the complaint Friday, he called a Mustang Daily reporter Thursday night before the election results were announced and expressed renewed anger about Hammond's campaign. He said CCR Secretary Beth Tucker had called him shortly before placing his call to the reporter and she expressed concern about Hammond's alleged abuses of power as CCR president.

"I re-evaluated for a time after I talked to Beth on the phone. But after sleeping on it, I think Tyler would do the best job," Johnson said Friday.

Hammond said he talked to Johnson Thursday night after election results were announced and found that Johnson was going to withdraw his complaint. Hammond said he then tried unsuccessfully to reach the editor of Mustang Daily at home. Hammond said he did not try calling the newsroom.

Regarding allocation of CCR funds, CCR Vice President Bob Tapella said, "By constitution, they have to be approved, but by process they are often made retrospectively. We have a trust between members." Often, it is unknown what certain expenses will be in advance, he added.

Tapella said, "If you go black and white, what was done was incorrect. There's no denying that. It's the gray area that causes problems. A lot of what we do is in the gray area. Generally, we are not strictly by the book — that's the way we've gone the last three years."

Tapella said he and many other CCR members personally endorsed Hammond. "I have endorsed Tyler Hammond. He does not have an official endorsement. It's another gray area."

Hammond is president of CCR.

Sense of community needed

Family unit is discussed

By Julie Anne Lauer

Staff Writer

The proposition that Christianity is fact and that human beings need a sense of community and family was discussed Thursday night in Chumash Auditorium.

Susan Schaeffer Macaulay spoke to an audience of more than 200 people about the future of the family. The presentation, "Feminism and the Future of the Home: A Personal Perspective on Woman, Humanity and Society," was presented by FACT, the Fellowship of Active Christian Thinkers.

Macaulay proposed that Christianity is true and is a way of life

Rhetoric, mudslinging: when will it end?

The rhetoric surrounding the recent ASI presidential election has disgusted the Mustang Daily Editorial Board. It's hard to believe the office of ASI president is so important to some people that they will use almost any means possible to discredit their opponents. It seems a conflict of egos and insecurities have triumphed in this election.

A case in point is the campaign of Steve Johnson, who lost the election and gained only 151 votes. He assembled a collage of three semi-serious allegations against Tyler Hammond, only to back down after the polls had closed. Now Johnson is saying everybody should go out and vote for Hammond in the runoff election.

It seems the timing of Johnson's allegations, coupled with the timing of the withdrawal of his complaint, might raise questions about Johnson's own campaign. He says he withdrew the allegations after learning the results of the election because he believes Hammond would be a better choice than Kevin Swanson.

If we were Hammond we would be angry at Johnson.

Regardless of the seriousness (or flippancy) of Johnson's allegations, it seems strange that they were filed the first day of the election, rather than the day after the election — the usual time to file complaints. What was Johnson hoping to accomplish?

Now Mike Hogan and David Kaminskas have filed charges against Hammond and Swanson. They claim there were further campaign violations not mentioned by Johnson.

Though some allegations may be serious and worthy of consideration, others are simply exaggerated mistakes. Though candidates may get their just revenge, the voters get spattered from all of the mudslinging. Will they even be willing to vote again?

Supporting Contras supports terrorism

Last week, the House of Representatives put Reagan's request for military aid to the Contras on hold. While 62 percent of Americans oppose military aid (Harris Poll April 16, 1986), Congress has been reluctant to refuse the president's request. In large part this is due to a number of misconceptions aggressively fostered by the Reagan administration: 1) that Nicaragua is to blame for the failure to reach a negotiated solution; and 2) that the Contras are popular "freedom fighters" struggling for genuine democracy and social justice.

The history of the Contadora peace process suggests it is the Reagan administration, not Nicaragua, that is preventing a negotiated settlement. Reagan justifies funding and directing Contra activities by claiming Nicaragua arms insurgencies, threatens its neighbors with its military buildup and is a Soviet-Cuban "beach head." First, none of the alleged arms flows have been intercepted by the Contras or U.S. intelligence forces. Also, Nicaragua has agreed to reduce the size of its military and send home Cuban military advisers when the U.S. stops waging war. Reagan refused to sign the 1985 Contadora Peace Pact, broke off bilateral talks with Nicaragua and broke his April 1985 promise to Congress to resume direct talks. Two weeks ago, Nicaragua rejected a Contadora proposal because no provisions were made for cessation of U.S. support for the Contras. According to three congressmen who observed the proceedings, Nicaragua would have been foolish to sign a binding agreement that provides for everyone else's national security interests but its own. Reagan's push for increased aid and U.S. military advisers for the Contras dangerously escalates U.S. involvement, while negating administration claims it is searching for a peaceful solution.

Another reason to stop supporting the Contras is, contrary to Reagan's claims, the Contras do not have support of the Nicaraguan people. They rely on terrorist tactics and their political front; the United Nicaraguan Opposition (UNO), has chosen armed struggle over democratic participation. The Contras' lack of popular support is demonstrated by their inability to control any territory within Nicaragua after five years of effort. This is not surprising given their well-documented assaults upon rural villages, schools and health centers, and the deliberate killing of civilians. In a cynical effort to improve their tarnished public image, the Reagan administration organized and funded UNO. Leaders of UNO, by supporting armed struggle and refusing to compete with seven other political parties in the 1984 election, failed to undermine the election, which international observers acclaimed as open, fair and honest.

Finally, the alleged commitment of the U.S. to the democratic aspiration of Third World peoples fails to stand the test of history. Our consistent support for, and intervention on behalf of, oppressive governments demonstrates that the U.S. has been more interested in supporting governments that cater to U.S. interests than supporting genuine democracy and social justice. Reagan certainly has the right to criticize civil and human rights violations by other governments. However, his attempt to install a government in Nicaragua that will cater to the interests of the U.S. — while cloaking that attempt in false appeals for political pluralism — cannot be justified on legal, moral or national security grounds. If it is wrong for a foreign nation to wage terrorist attacks on U.S. citizens, then it cannot be right for the administration to support such attacks against the people of Nicaragua.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Johnson reverses, endorses Hammond

Editor — Well, I can honestly say that I am glad that this ASI Election is over for me.

As a candidate for ASI president, I have heard the various candidates numerous times and on various subjects. It is my opinion that the best candidate is and will be Tyler Hammond. He is willing to take on problems and try new ideas and solutions. Given his chance, Tyler will make a very fine president.

Many of you have heard allegations (some by myself) against several of Tyler's campaign actions. I believe there is something important for students to note before they make a decision on these allegations. At no time did Tyler Hammond EVER willfully, intentionally or maliciously violate campaign rules. I sincerely believe that! It is for this reason, above all others, that I have notified the ASI elections committee that I am withdrawing all of my allegations against Tyler

Hammond.

It has been my pleasure to have run against Tyler in this election, working with him on senate and Administrative Commission and to have been his friend. I hope that after all of this it can still be such. I shall support Tyler Hammond for ASI president and I encourage the student body to also do so.

STEVEN P. JOHNSON
Former ASI presidential candidate

ASI student leaders still back Hammond

Editor — After an investigation, the allegations submitted by former ASI presidential candidate Steve Johnson have been withdrawn, further proving Tyler Hammond's integrity. His word is as good as his bond.

We as student leaders have worked extensively over the years with Tyler Hammond and feel he would be a positive force and best choice for ASI president. He deserves our support.

Air Force to look into explosion

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A wide-ranging Air Force investigation into last week's Titan rocket launch explosion will focus on "O" rings in its solid fuel boosters and even the possibility of sabotage.

"We will be looking at everything ... (the solid fuel) boosters, rings, propellants and electronics," said Maj. Gen. Jack L. Watkins, commander of the 1st Strategic Aerospace Division at Vandenberg.

Watkins would not speculate about the cause of the explosion, but he did say that one concern is the "ring connectors on the solid rocket booster."

Addressing the question of sabotage, Watkins said "it's one of those things we must always take into consideration." But he said "things like terrorist activities and sabotage would probably not be discussed in public."

Body of American flown home

WASHINGTON (AP) — The corpse of Peter Kilburn, the American kidnap victim reportedly killed last week in retaliation for the U.S. air raid on Libya, was flown to Andrews Air Force Base near Washington on Sunday and taken for forensic tests, a State Department spokesman said.

Kilburn's body was discovered Tuesday with those of two Britons in Lebanon's central mountains, along with a note saying they had been executed by the Arab Revolutionary Cells to avenge the U.S. attack against Libya the night before.

State Department spokesman Bruce Ammerman said Kilburn's body "has arrived and is being sent for a forensic exam, but I don't know where. When and if a forensic ID is made, a statement will be issued."

Activist downplays South African reforms

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — South Africa's repeal of pass laws is not a softening of its apartheid system, says antiapartheid crusader Mamphela Ramphele, because her people still lack the power to improve their lives.

"We are in for tougher times," said the South African activist, who was in Anaheim for a speech to the United Methodist Women's Conference.

"They (government officials) are becoming more subtle. They will repeal every piece of legislation regarding racial segregation, but the poverty and powerlessness of blacks will remain," she said Saturday.

"Then the world will sit back and say to us, 'Well, what else do you want? The rest is up to you.' But without a say in how our lives are governed, without real power, we cannot make progress," she said.

Reagan, Gorbachev meeting could occur later this year

POTSDAM, East Germany (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Sunday that he was willing to meet President Reagan this year if the United States changed policies he charged were poisoning relations between the superpowers.

Speaking to reporters at Potsdam, site of the 1945 Allied conference on Germany, Gorbachev said "the meeting (with Reagan) can take place if the United States realizes that it is necessary to take this path."

"But if it (America) goes on acting as it is today, trying to poison the atmosphere, this will throw a shadow over any future meeting," the Soviet Communist Party chief said.

Gorbachev did not elaborate, but he appeared to be referring to last week's U.S. bombing raids on Libya and recent U.S. underground tests of nuclear weapons.

White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Reagan said Sunday the United States expected Gorbachev to meet with Reagan this year.

Committee to examine PCB in light fixtures

By Joe Bissin
Staff Writer

The Executive Committee of the Academic Senate has moved to investigate the danger from fluorescent light ballasts containing the chemical PCB.

Senate Chair Lloyd Lamouria said Thursday, "I asked (history professor) Barbara Hallman and (agriculture management professor) Marlin Vix to put together a joint resolution to address the problem." The motion came during a meeting of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, mandate to clean up the PCBs since they are present in such small quantities in the individual fixtures. However, both Hallman and Vix said they feel the large number of ballasts makes the danger from the chemical-bearing fixtures considerable.

Steps are being taken to phase out the ballasts containing PCBs. Ed Naretto, director of Plant Operations, confirmed that out of a total of approximately 2,000 ballasts in Engineering West, 1,000 have already been replaced. The remaining ballasts are scheduled to be replaced this summer.

Hallman, however, would like to see all the suspect ballasts on campus replaced, and a main concern of the investigative committee will be locating sufficient funds to accomplish this.

"We will try to find funding to accelerate the process of cleaning up the PCBs," said Vix.

One possible source of this money is a potential windfall created by the current drop in energy prices. According to a memorandum sent to the Academic Senate by Director of Business Affairs James Landreth, there is a projected total of $428,000 in "utility surpluses and excess reimbursements."

The total estimated cost of replacing all the suspect ballasts on campus is $350,000, said Hallman.

However, according to Executive Committee member Tim Kersten, that money is being eyed closely by a variety of campus factions in need of funding.

Hallman said Friday she and Vix will be joined by English professor Susan Currier in preparing the resolution, which is to be presented to the Executive Committee in a meeting on April 29.

and is therefore relevant to all life and not just some narrow religious area, as many believe.

"Seeing needs and serving people is the essence of humanity," Macaulay said. "You can't have community or family without a willingness to serve."

Macaulay said the family is a small community and humans have a need for a sense of community.

The problem, as Macaulay sees it, is that the sense of family has been lost. Close neighborhoods have disappeared and people have lost a lot of their sense of community.

If Christianity is true then serving each other is more important than a career, Macaulay said.

"The reality is that we are limited. We can't do everything so we have to decide what is important," Macaulay said she understands, however, that it is often necessary for women to have a career and to help support their family. She views the future of the family unit in the willingness of people to make time for each other.

Susan Macaulay: people have lost their sense of community

The mother of four children, Macaulay said she has been a working mother but her work has always been home-based so she could work and be with her children.

Macaulay, who was born in the United States and still maintains her American citizenship, has lived in Switzerland for the most of her life since she was a child. She left Switzerland to go to England for her college education and to work when she was 18 but later returned to continue with her work. She now lives and works in Huemoz, Switzerland.

Macaulay is a member of L'abri, a group founded by her parents that provides an open home to those in need of spiritual shelter. She lives and works in Chalet les Melezes, part of the Huemoz branch of L'abri.

Macaulay has written three books: "Something Beautiful from God," a book about children; "For the Children's Sake;" and "How to be Your Own Selfish Pig and Other Ways You've Been Brainwashed." In addition, she travels and speaks to groups about her faith and beliefs. This was her first trip to California.

of the Pacific in Stockton to earn a bachelor of arts degree in broadcast speech because the college's FM station had a reputation as the state's best training ground.

He worked in all phases of that station, edited the student newspaper and served as the student athletic director before his graduation in 1951.

Zuchelli honed his announcing and sales skills at radio station KJOY and KWG and TV Channel 13 in Stockton. From 1955 to 1969 he was a part owner of radio station KCOY, now KUHL, in Santa Maria. In addition to his news, public affairs and management duties there, he was responsible for gaining the license for KCOY-TV in Santa Maria and served as vice president of Channel 12 for two years.

In 1969, then President Robert E. Kennedy asked Zuchelli to come to Cal Poly to serve as adviser for a fledgling campus radio station. He was responsible for the growth of that 1.7 watt broadcasting laboratory housed in the journalism department into KCPR-FM, a 2,000-watt, 24-hour station run by some 125 student volunteers.

Keeping the station on the air in lean budget years through such stratagems as auctions and a Booster Club, Zuchelli taught — as he liked to say — “everything in journalism except photography, editing and agriculture.” His students went on to jobs — many in radio and television news — all over the West.

He found time to earn a master's degree in English at Cal Poly.

Zuchelli's voice became familiar to Central Coast listeners through play-by-play broadcasts of Mustang football and basketball games on radio station KATY in the '70s, Morro Bay High School games on KABI in the '80s and San Luis Obispo High School games on KATY as recently as last year.

In 1984-85 he conducted a telephone talk show on KATY and he continued to be active as a consultant to radio station managers and prospective buyers.

In Santa Maria, he served as a member of the City Council, was a former president of the Visitors and Convention Bureau of the Santa Maria Valley Chamber of Commerce and a former member of the California Space Shuttle Task Force.

One of his favorite assignments was as master of ceremonies of the Santa Maria Hot Stove Baseball Dinner where he could rub elbows and swap quips with the likes of Pete Rose, Vida Blue and Joe DiMaggio.

Zuchelli was a member of Pioneer Broadcasters, the National Association of Sportswriters and Broadcasters, the Society of Professional Journalists and the Radio and Television News Directors Association.

He is survived by his wife, Virginia, and two sons, John Casey and Patrick Louis Zuchelli, all of Los Osos; a daughter, Ann of Santa Maria, a grandson Joshua Vasquez of Los Osos, his mother, Mary Ellen Zuchelli of Los Angeles, a stepbrother Bernard Nelson of Rancho Palos Verdes and a close cousin, Virginia MacLachie of Los Angeles. A daughter, Monica, preceded him in death.

PROF PROTEST

By Lisa A. Houk
Staff Writer

Members of Concerned Cal Poly Faculty and Staff have regrouped after taking a break from their non-violent efforts to oppose Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant. Their new goal: Foundation divestment from companies which do business in South Africa.

"We put forth great amounts of collective energy into the direct action against Diablo Canyon, but after its final approval to begin operating, we were not reconciled and very tired, so we took some time off," said Richard Kranzdorf, Cal Poly political science professor and activist in CCPFS. "Now it's time to meet up again to add some new members to the group and gain new perspectives to issues such as divestiture and oil exploration and development."

Kranzdorf summed up CCPFS's non-violent actions in the Diablo protest as involving letter writing, appearing before government bodies and trespassing, and added that during the demonstrations and marches about 20 to 25 Cal Poly faculty and staff members were arrested. Kranzdorf said this type of direct action by CCPFS is just an example of how a group which focuses on a particular issue can get more done than any type of individual effort.

First they targeted Diablo Canyon Nuclear Power Plant. Now, Concerned Cal Poly Faculty and Staff take on issues such as South African divestment and oil development

"My feeling is that a number of issues cry out for involvement and the common denominator to all of us is the belief at a university that our role does not end with the classroom," said Kranzdorf. "CCPFS gives the faculty and staff a chance to be active on the issues they once only talked about."

One issue CCPFS faces this quarter is the Foundation's proposed divestment from companies in South Africa. In a March 14 meeting with the Cal Poly Foundation Board of Directors, Kranzdorf presented a list of 30 universities which have voted for full divestment from South Africa and showed that reports have confirmed divestment has not decreased profits. He also made a recommendation to the board to postpone a vote on the issue until May 2 to allow more people on campus to become more informed and aware of Foundation involvement in South Africa.

"This issue of divestment concerns the university and local area," Kranzdorf said. "At our first meeting, we proceeded to believe that this university will not be undermining its fiduciary responsibility by divesting itself of less than $1 million of stock of the companies which are doing business in South Africa."

CCPFS plans to meet Monday to further explore this issue of divestment and other matters of common concern. Kranzdorf is pleased that CCPFS brings together the people who are willing to speak out, and he invites any new faculty and staff members to join the group. The Monday meeting will be held at the home of architecture professor Paul Wolff.

"I always urge my students to ignite a sense of caring and participation in themselves, and with a group such as CCPFS, I can follow my own advice and become actively involved," said Kranzdorf. "As Ghandi put it so clearly: 'it is almost certain whatever you do will not make a difference, but it is very important that you do it.'"

Former FFA president to discuss American dream

By Sandy Bradley
Staff Writer

What is the American dream and how does it relate to agriculture? That is what an author, publisher and former president of the national Future Farmers of America will discuss Wednesday in Chumash Auditorium.

Mark Sanborn is only 27 years old but he's accomplished much in that short span of time.

He is past president of the national FFA, an organization with more than half a million high school students that offers vocational training and helps prepare them for a career in agriculture.

Sanborn was a publisher of Successful Farm Journal, then left that position to become a professional speaker and business and personal development consultant.

"I've given speeches since I was 10 years old — beginning with civic and church groups, then I was paid for the first time in 1979 and have spoken professionally part-time ever since," said Sanborn.

Sanborn co-authored a book released in March called "How to Live the American Dream."

"The American dream, or what I think it is, sounds very basic. It's just that Americans can pretty much be anything and become any person they want to be."

Sanborn said people became disillusioned with the American dream in the 1960s and 1970s.

"Then the dream was very stereotyped. To have money, a nice house, a spouse and kids was what people were supposed to have. Some were embarrassed to admit they had other dreams besides making money."

"The co-author and I saw a need for a high school textbook that dealt with the importance of leadership and personal development. We just divided the book in half and wrote about the basic ideas we had learned through the years," Sanborn said.

"One problem is in our schools. Ninety percent of what is taught in high schools are technical skills, not human skills. It's an ironic imbalance of what you really need to be successful: an ability to get along with people and to be able to communicate well."

"Since 75 percent of a manager's time is spent communicating with his co-workers, I think that the single most important business skill anyone can have is the ability to communicate."

"The typical business person knows much more than they can communicate. People should seek out continuing education programs, seminars and organizations for help in improving their communication skills," he said.

Communication is also an important part of agriculture. Sanborn said he sees a need for better communication of the agricultural crisis to political and legislative sectors. He also believes the industry needs more promotion to make it successful.

US says it has scared Khadafy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key administration officials believe that last week's bombing raid on Col. Moammar Khadafy's headquarters frightened the Libyan leader, emboldened his enemies in his own country and put renewed pressure on America's European allies to combat terrorism.

At the same time, however, the same officials expect the United States may well be prompted to strike again.

"We're not looking for a pretext to hit him again," one source said, "but I think we just know the problem isn't over. It may be that Khadafy is weaker because of what we did, and that's all the more reason to keep after him."

The officials, who were involved in administration policy making in the weeks leading up to President Reagan's decision to launching the bombing raid, agreed to discuss their view of its effects only on condition they not be identified.

Khadafy's drop from public view immediately after the attack and subsequent appearances only on television, rather than in the streets of Tripoli, "suggest that he's very scared," one official said. "He's worried about assassination attempts, let alone us knowing where he might be."

He obviously feels that we're going after him."

Another source with access to U.S. intelligence reports said the Libyan leader "is scared now, and he knows that if he goes after us again, we're going to go after his terrorist infrastructure again."

"If he happens to be sitting in the command post at the time and place that we decide to hit, then he'll pay the ultimate price," the official said, suggesting the United States would be delighted if Khadafy were killed in an air raid, while insisting he was not a specific target.

Asked about Libyan reports that Khadafy's adopted daughter was killed in the bombing and two sons were seriously wounded, one administration analyst said, "He had his family at the headquarters. It was a risk that he ran that he obviously felt wasn't a risk."

The officials said the raid was carefully aimed at Khadafy's revolutionary guard and "his political base of support, as opposed to the regular military." Khadafy is said to distrust his own regular forces and has grown more and more dependent on the special guard and the militia to keep him in power.

"There was a cliché around that every time you did something all it did was strengthen him," one official said. "It was always clear to us that was not necessarily true, and an equally good case could be made for the opposite, that you could reinforce in the minds of the Libyans that the whole country was paying a price for this guy's policies."

While the sources acknowledged Khadafy has been able to send people back into the streets to cheer him, one insisted, "there has been no outpouring of support. Indeed, all the fissures in this regime seemed to start to broaden" after the bombing.

There were reports of rebellion in the army and unrest in the countryside, but those appeared to dissipate with Khadafy's appearance on state-run television, proving he had survived the attack on his compound.

The administration can do little to instigate a coup d'etat, the officials said.

As one put it, "We don't have that many tools available. It isn't something we can expect to influence (and) will depend on internal forces much more than external."

The United States has had an influence, however, on its own allies, particularly in Western Europe, where there was stiff opposition to Reagan's raid.

Marcos admits owning US land

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos has "confirmed" for the first time that he owns property in the United States, valued at more than $3 million, it was reported Sunday.

A copyright story in the San Francisco Examiner, following an interview at Marcos' rented exile home in Honolulu, also quoted the deposed leader as saying he owns land in the Philippines valued at $25 million. Marcos said the property "was bought for me without my authorization."

Marcos told the newspaper properties of his in New Jersey were bought for his two children with "money borrowed from friends and some of our own." One home is estimated to be worth $3 million, the other $130,000, he said.

"That's about the only property we have in the United States I can think of," Marcos told a reporter. The specific sites of the properties were not reported.

Other properties linked to the Marcoses include Manhattan office buildings and tracts of land in California and Texas.

Marcos and his family have been accused by the new government of Corazon Aquino of taking an estimated $5 billion out of the country during his 20-year rule.

"We can't talk about the facts of each case because of lawsuits," Marcos told the Examiner. "But all this talk about Texas and California, it's ridiculous ... I have never stolen money from my people."

Marcos said he has broken his silence about properties in the United States "because I noticed that only the side of Cory and her group was getting printed."

Students get help from specially trained dogs

By Megan Humpal

Staff Writer

They may be considered man's best friend, but dogs are also eyes, arms and legs for some people.

Working dogs are specially trained to help the handicapped, and their owners rely on them for many everyday activities.

One type of working dog that can be seen in action throughout campus is the service dog. These $5,000 dogs are trained to help the mobility-impaired by acting as their arms and legs. Latham, a service dog owned by Beth Currier, can push elevator buttons, open doors and pull Currier's wheelchair through school.

Currier, assistant coordinator for Disabled Student Services, has had Latham by her side every day for three years. "Latham goes everywhere with me," she said. "I would not be nearly as independent without him."

Latham is capable of pulling Currier up hills on campus and can pick up everything for her, from a thin pen to a large can of tomato juice.

Another service dog on campus is Zenith, owned by child and family development major Barbara Ellison. Ellison has had her smooth-haired collie for about one year. Zenith, like all service dogs, is trained to respond to 87 different verbal commands. "She has the ability to turn on and off light switches, push elevator buttons and pick up paper off the floor with her tongue," Ellison said. "But in general she is a motor for my wheelchair."

One of the two guide dogs on campus belongs to Mike Frimmel, a senior business administration major. His dog Jack is worth $8,000, and works as Frimmel's eyes. "These dogs have an average working life of eight years because the stress takes its toll," he said.

All three dog owners emphasized these are working dogs, not pets. "They are definitely companions to us, but it is important that people understand that we are not abusing our dogs by making them pull us around or by disciplining them," Currier said.

Ellison said these dogs have the mentality of a 5-year-old child and they can easily be distracted while they are working. "It is important that students realize that they cannot pet our dogs unless they ask first because it breaks their concentration which can be dangerous to us."

The owners don't mind if people pet their dogs but it is important that they release their dog from duty first.

Currier said one time Latham was pulling her up a theater aisle when a man held out a hand of popcorn which caught the dog's attention and consequently she started to roll backward.

"The dog is a great conversation starter," said Currier. "People who otherwise wouldn't come up and talk to me now come up and talk about the dog. I can barely get through the market any more because everyone wants to talk about Latham."

Terrorism affecting US film crews

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fear of terrorism abroad has struck Hollywood, with U.S. guards protecting a film crew in Greece, movie executives warning their staffs to be on guard in foreign trouble spots and television companies canceling plans to work in Europe.

The cast and crew of "Hardbodies II" were surprised when American guards came on their set in Greece last week to provide protection while they filmed a sequel to the 1984 comedy.

"There have been no signs of trouble for us," Dimitri Logothetis, one of the film's producers, said in Los Angeles. "But the day after the bombing (the U.S. attack on Libya), the American embassy sent over a couple of guards."

Greece is one of the places where officials fear terrorists may strike against Americans. Most of the people involved in "Hardbodies II" are U.S. citizens, and Logothetis' production company, First American Film Capitol, is based here.

"Because we're working on location, we're in a high-visibility kind of situation," he said, "so I guess the embassy figured it was a matter of precaution."

Ladies lose to Pomona, NorthridgeMustangs hoping for third place

Two losses during the weekend put the Cal Poly women's tennis team in a tough spot.

A 3-6 loss to Cal Poly Pomona and a 1-8 loss to Cal State Northridge dropped the netters' league record to 5-5 and 9-12 overall.

But more than dropping their record, the losses also force the Mustangs to win the rest of their matches to end up in third place in the CCAA.

"For us to end up in third place, we must beat Cal State L.A. and Bakersfield," said coach Orion Yeast.

At press time Sunday, the Mustangs were still playing Cal State Los Angeles and today the Mustangs will take on Cal State Bakersfield in their last league match of the season at 1:30 p.m.

Against fifth-ranked Pomona, the only singles win for the Mustangs came from Amy Lansford at number six, when she downed Andrea Montouri 6-0, 6-2. Lansford was moved to the number six position by Yeast to replace an injured Cristin Leverte.

"She (Lansford) is playing very well," said Yeast. "She won two matches for us this past week."

In doubles play, Patti Hilliard and Amy Stubbs teamed up to beat their opponents 6-3, 1-6, 6-2. Carol Mellberg and Chris Calandra also recorded a victory in the win column with a 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 match.

Against fourth-ranked Northridge, the only win for the Mustangs came from Lansford, who won her singles match against Brenda Pantano 6-4, 2-6, 6-1. Mary Langenfeld missed the match because of a bout with the flu.

The Mustangs take on Bakersfield today in the last regular season match. After that, they will travel south to Ojai for the Ojai Valley Tennis Tournament April 24-27. Then the Mustangs will gear up for the NCAA National Championships at Northridge May 5-10.

DARYL SHOFTAUGH/Mustang Daily

Shoulders, Buford T. Lite come to Poly

By Sandy Bradley
Staff Writer

People have seen him in a number of Miller Lite beer commercials with his sidekick Buford T. Lite, a 1,300-pound tame Brahma bull. Now they'll both be here for Poly Royal.

Jim Shoulders is a champion bull and bareback rider with an impressive background. He is an honoree of the National Rodeo Hall of Fame and the Madison Square Garden Hall of Fame.

"He has more world champion titles than any other cowboy in the history of rodeo," said Rich Donahoo, regional director of the National Collegiate Rodeo Association, or NIRA.

He was all-around champion five times, in 1949, and 1956 through 1959. He was bull riding champion seven times: 1951 and 1952, and 1955 through 1959. He was also bareback riding champion four times, in 1950, 1956, 1957 and 1958.

"You could even go so far as to call him the Arnold Palmer of rodeo," said Donahoo.

Between his first all-around title in 1949 and his final season in 1959, Shoulders broke his collarbone three times, had plastic surgery on his nose, operations on his knee and broke 17 facial bones in 1960 when he was hooked by a Brahma bull.

He left the professional circuit to produce rodeos and teach rodeo riding at a school on his 500-acre ranch in his home state, Oklahoma, and now continues to appear in Miller Lite beer commercials.

Shoulders will come to San Luis Obispo in association with the Cal Poly Rodeo Club to promote college rodeo.

He and his bull will be at McClintock's Saloon from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursday. Then they'll be at Stanley Motors Dodge on Friday morning joining Carol Meyer from US 98 radio in a live broadcast. Then from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. Friday they'll be at the Graduate.

COMPLAINTS

show for CCR at about the same time he was making his campaign videotape. An invoice for use of AV slide equipment could not be located Thursday because it was in a hold file. On Friday, however, an April 11 AV invoice was located and it showed Hammond had rented two slide trays and a sound slide projector. Also, Robert Schrempp, AV technical assistant, said an April 4 invoice for Hammond's use of the audio studio pertained to the CCR slide show and not Hammond's campaign video.

"What was unclear was that I was doing two things at the same time," Hammond said.

Hammond also said he informed CCR members about the campaign video at a CCR meeting Thursday night.

Because all of Hammond's AV invoices couldn't be located Thursday, an article in Mustang Daily Friday mistakenly stated Hammond's campaign video cost $46. According to AV records, the total expense for the campaign video is $30, broken down as follows: $20 for two days of transmitting the video into classrooms at $10 per day and $10 for one hour of video studio time.

The cost for the CCR slide show, according to invoices, amounts to $4 for use of the sound slide projector and $10 for the use of the audio studio.

Hammond said he planned to reimburse CCR on Friday for the remainder of the campaign video expenses. He had already paid Tapella $10. Hammond said that amount had been quoted to him by an AV technician over the phone.

Regarding the initial allegations, Johnson said Friday: "It was warranted that the executive committee of CCR at least know about it. The only item that I am sure was a clear violation was the booth at Farmers Market, and he had no knowledge of that occurring."

John Watson, elections committee chair, said the elections committee will make recommendations to the Student Senate regarding the complaints. The Student Senate will hold a special meeting tonight to examine the allegations, he said.

The complaint by Hogan and Kaminskas essentially repeats Johnson's initial complaint except it accuses both Hammond and Swanson of distribution of campaign materials during the election. Hogan and Kaminskas cited the Friday Mustang Daily article as a reference for two of the charges against Hammond.

Hammond said, "They're taking everything in Mustang Daily as fact when things weren't substantiated."

The article did not accuse Hammond, but it did summarize Johnson's allegations.

Kaminskas said Friday he would consider an endorsement of Hogan in the runoff. At this point, however, Hogan is not an ASI presidential candidate, having come in third place behind Swanson during the initial election.

Kaminskas and Hogan said Swanson and Hammond actively campaigned during the election period. Kaminskas said, "Swanson called on Wednesday (the first day of the election) to ask whether I would mind him putting up a neutral banner saying '85 percent of engineering students do not vote — that's why we lose.' I said that was OK (but) he posted a campaign statement with the banner."

Swanson responded, "I put a neutral poster up. They knew about that. The problem was that people were putting up posters. That happens quite a bit. Active campaigning is what you do yourself." Swanson also said he wished Hogan and Kaminskas had contacted him prior to filing the complaint.

Hogan said Hammond and Swanson were still responsible for the alleged violations even if not aware that they had occurred.

Although Hogan and Kaminskas listed only one formal complaint against Swanson, Hogan said he knew of numerous additional campaign violations by Swanson.

Another charge against Hammond by Hogan and Kaminskas claims Hammond admitted guilt. Hogan and Kaminskas said they talked to Hammond prior to filing the complaint.

Hammond said, "I explained to them what happened, and it might have been misconstrued." He said he did put a poster in the University Union, but didn't know it was a violation because other posters were posted.

Watson said there will be a new election for the remaining five candidates if the Student Senate disqualifies Hammond. He said there will be a debate between Hammond and Swanson in the U.U. Plaza at 11 a.m. Tuesday if the election results are accepted.

Watson said the elections committee is investigating Johnson's allegations, even though Johnson withdrew his complaint. Unofficial allegations made by Hammond against Hogan and Kaminskas are also being examined. Watson said the committee is investigating aspects of all six candidates' campaigns.

German police arrest 44 'skinheads' gathered for Hitler's birthday

FLENSBURG, West Germany (AP) — Police and anti-Nazi protesters clashed with more than 200 right-wing extremists who gathered in this northern town to celebrate Adolf Hitler's birthday, police said Sunday.
